THE COKE TRADE.

The Conneltsville coke trade of 1914 was more disappointing in volume than in price. The aggregate output was 14,000,000 tons against 20,000,000 for each of the two preceding years a falling off of 30%. The average price of $2 per ton, however, was only 26 cents or 11 1/2% less than the average price for ten years previously, which was $2.26.

This fact is due to market conditions which favored the seller, but a factor which entered largely into it was the determination of a strong group of merchant operators to hold their product firmly for fair prices. This interest justly contended that Conneltsville coke should not be sold at less than $2 per ton, that being the beginning of the twilight zone between living profit and actual loss.

The cost of producing Conneltsville coke varies at different plants, and also in some degree does the quality of the product, but these differences are not so great as to make the fixing of a fair minimum impossible or even embarrassing.

While no maximum was fixed, the expressed policy of the operators was to avoid as far as possible violent fluctuations. These conditions were very acceptable to businessmen generally, and during periods of steady business were readily applied, but the uncertain conditions of the past year caused consumers to forget their fair weather promises and to again insist that the Conneltsville coke makers should bring their prices down to the level of ruthless competition in pig iron, something the coke operators have always with justice protested against.

If the merchant pig iron producers had exercised the same prudence and wisdom which has characterized the coke operators, who have stood out for fair coke prices, pig iron would not now be so low nor would it have been necessary to sell Conneltsville coke under 12 per ton.

"Virtue hath its own reward," sometimes. In this case it looks as if the merchant coke operators who have stood fast and closed down their prices rather than sell coke at profitless prices will reap their reward. The future of the steel business looks bright. It is possible that there will be a largely increased demand for Conneltsville coke in consequence, a demand that may tax the capacity of the region in such case, the price of coke will naturally rise to liberal levels, and the operators who hang fast will touch best.

COMBINATIONS.

The West Virginia coal and coke operators have organized themselves into an association for the purpose (1) of conserving coal and coke by improved methods of production, (2) of providing the best, the safest and the most approved means for the mining of coal, and the safeguarding of miners and other employees engaged in the industry, and (3) of combating any effect of the labor unions to extend their organization in West Virginia.

There will be no objection, we take it, to the two first objects of the association, but the third and the fourth, subject of much violent dispute. It is to be hoped, however, that President Wilson will not have to call out the troops.

Some of the recent federal legislation, we believe, forbids all combinations in restraint of trade, but specifically exempts labor unions and farmers' organizations. These exemptions are ineffectual if not unlawful. There should be one law for everybody. We believe this proposition has been approximately worked out on all sides.

The West Virginia operators' association seems to be entirely within the law unless it becomes entangled with the exemption. Labor unions are permitted combinations in restraint of trade, and until recently the West Virginia operators might have justified their position in opposing them as one in strict accordance with law. The law has been changed, and if labor unions are thereby become lawful combinations they may not be opposed in any but a lawful manner.

The West Virginia operators have raised a question for lawyers to argue. "It is more blessed to give than to receive," says the text, yet the directors of Conneltsville's charity movement have found that it is more difficult to give than to receive. Their appeals have met with hearty response, but in the distribution of the public charity entrusted to their care they have found it difficult to avoid imposing upon the generosity of applicants. That, however, is one of the obligations of their office. It is their duty to separate the sheep from the goats.

THE YEAR 1914

By GEORGE FITZEL.
Author of "At Good Old Season."

The year 1914 which has just been deposited upon the calendar box of time with a sigh of relief will be known in history as the year in which civilization blew apart with a loud report and the world dropped back into the middle ages with a blood-chilling shriek of contentment.

No year began its career with brighter prospects than 1914. The wheat crop was in good health, business was taking nerve tone, the Mexican revolutionaries were exterminating each other with marked success and the price of automobiles had come down to about $500.

Nevertheless, no year has fallen down so completely on its assignments. In the very first month the football war burst with unprecedented fury upon the unsuspecting country, causing an enormous extra expense of time which the sportsman could ill afford to devote to the sport. Later on the English polo players and golfers and the Australian

In August Europe was seized with insanity coupled with homicidal mania.

Tennis team removed three champions from this country without using anesthetics. In July the postoffice borrowed the panic for campaign purposes, and in August Europe was seized with insanity coupled with homicidal mania.

The year 1914 has seen a doubling of the death rate in Europe and of the interest rate in this country. Delirium has been rampant from the camp and the Philadelphia Americans have been reduced to a second class power. An unusually large number of presidents have happened to Mexico, and the Interstate Commerce Commission has given the railroads permission to soak the passenger a deadly blow in the pocketbook. The Emperor of Haiti was lost early in the year and the Progressive Party was temporarily disbanded in November. Among the unexpected phenomena of the year were the playing of a football game with a western team by Harvard, the winning of the westward bound freight championship by Illinois, the production of half a million automobiles in this country, the harvesting of 900,000,000 bushels of wheat in the bosom of the hard times and the collapse of Haystack Kipling.

The importation of foreign husbands dropped almost to zero during the year, as did also the pork barrel appropriations. The number of poets doubled and as many new and devastating verse forms were invented. The American troops were removed from Vera Cruz and a bill introduced, to make the American army visible to the public in the line of trouble.

In November the country went Democratic in a hesitating and embarrassed manner, but Roger Sullivan was not elected to anything in 1914. Because of this the Secretary Brown wrote himself on Thanksgiving.

In spite of a few bright spots here and there the year 1914 has been unanimously voted a dismal failure.

PLANT NEARING COMPLETION

The Windland-Gilmore Company to Have 60 Ovens.

The Windland-Gilmore Coal & Coke Company is completing its Windland plant of 60 ovens, on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad near Smithton. It expects to be ready for operation within 30 days.

Although the mine is some distance from the ovens, the coal is readily delivered. Electric power is to be used, it being supplied by the West Penn Electric Company.

The coke plant is equipped with mechanical drivers with an improved head which, it is claimed, prevents the breakage of coke into small particles. This device is the invention of W. H. Wait, who is to be superintendent of both the Windland and the Danmar-Conneltsville plants.

The Windland-Gilmore company is not incorporated, the owners of the plant being Elmer Windland of Philadelphia and R. W. Gilmore of Uniontown.

Begins Saturday, January 2nd

Earlier than ever before, the sale holds more opportunities than previously. Thus by reason of enlarged stocks, greater assortments and lower prices than we generally put on goods for quick clearance. The year was particularly advantageous for right buying, and we let slip no opportunity when the goods measured up to our standard of quality. It's the remainders of these specially bought things that have been deeply cut—the staple merchandise and the fashionables. Nothing in the sale is old or useless and much is not four weeks in stock. A clearance time it all goes and with little regard for price: a store like this, to keep fresh and clean, must take certain losses which are gained to its patrons. You'll do best here, where the best is to be found and we hope you'll farewell, which you may, if alert to the yearly money-saving chance.
